The Judges Get Sleepy and Go to Be Leaving the Results Unknown to

The Australian sytem of voting has been ag were sur; riseu unage as imagined. In precincts a the judges understood their busine hitch was chronicled, but where a did not understand the law some difficulty was at first experienced, but praces agave them confidence, and as the day grew on it was as easy as failing off a log, to use a homely simile.

There were fourteen precincts, two for the four precincts in the first each ward. The four precincts in the first each ward spoiling the leaviest vote and Sixth wards polling the leaviest order one by surface course and began to get back and Sixth wards polling the leaviest order one by simile one were placed on the democratic candidates, but later on more deeping and began to get back and Sixth wards polling the leaviest vote and state or more each ward. The four precincts in the first each ward in for the republicans, who as a state of the control of the fort the fort the fort of the first each ward in the first each ward in fort the expression of the expension of the exp "official ballot." He then retires to a stall and marks an X opposite the name for which he wants to vote. He returns to where the judges sit with the ballot so folded that nothing but "official ballot" appears. The ballot is placed in a box and room is made for the next voter.

The ballot voted in Helena was a clumsy thanks and rooms and rooms. 224 inches and contained.

in the majority of the precincts the polls did not open promptly at 8 o'clock and in In the eighth precinct Judge Joseph Davis and photographer Ball constituted a republican quotum and they proceeded to elect their judges, E. C. Russell and a Mr. Glass. The judge then skipped around and organized several other precincts no democrats showing up. In the eighth precinct the judges appointed Michael Meyendorff a special otheer. Some democrats came in about this time and protested against Mr. Meyendorff Cocupying that position. Dune McDonard, a deputy sheriff came in about this time and was appealed to to remove Mr. Meyendorff but instead of so doing he pulled off his badge and pinned it on Mr. Meyendorff, who took possession of the gate. Sheriff Jefferis was informed and degraded Mr. Meyendorff to the ranks.

In the First ward, Judge Davis was on hand as usual, and he and Secretary Kinsley ordered the officers to remove the democratic challengers. A profest was made cratic challengers.

he decided that the democratic challengers under the law had as much right to remain as the republican challengers. Scattered around at every poil were deputy United States marshals, but they did not interfere with any one voting, except in one instance, and that was in the case of Major Maginnis, who was stopped by a deputy United States marshal named Hail, who told him he could not vete. The major very normally states are representatives—Beach, 140; Burns, 134; Comly, 145; Corey, 153; Horsky, 162; Howey, 152; Hoiter, 153; Keefe, 153; and the could not vete the major that the state of the could not vete the major that the state of the could not vete the major that the state of the could not vete the could The major very prompt caught the fellow by the nape of the neck and threw him over the railings, walked in and deposited his ballot. legal voting among republicans were checked by the democratic challenger. The method reported was to attempt to vote under names which had already been voted. Charley Brown, an old timer, was victim of this system of voting, bu whether it was intentional or that a man of hised. He was engaged in driving a con when he appeared to cast ballot, though well known ew state of Montana. Many defects in he registry law were brought out. How

The bulletins were placed on this board and could be read easily a distance of 300 feet by the aid of a strong electric light. The Herald's dispatches were not volumnious, but they were shown in good shape. The Journal's bulletins could very seldom be read, as either the professor who manipulated the lantern was out of order or the such a wery military country, and the Emperor William is such a thorough soldier that strict military disciple is the order of the day in the nurseries of his little people.

As soon as petticoats are left off the tiny boys are dressed in baby uniform, and the young crown prince looks quite like a little soldier.

When their father visits them in their own quarters (as I suppose I ought to call such a very military nursery) the crown prince commands his smaller brothers to fail in."

Then Frederick and Albert, who are scarcely more than bables, "fall in."

Little Prince Albert is such a mite that he is not able to keep his position for long, and he soon trots away to his nurse's side. But the crown prince and Prince Frederick and he soon trots away to his nurse's side.

Every dispatch placed on the bulletin board was cheered. It seemingly made no difference which ticket was ahead. There could always be found somebody to cheer. The builetins of this office attracted the most attention and a large concourse of anxious citizens read the builetins with feverish impatience. Everybody was in a good humor, however, and beyond a little quiet chaffing nothing was said or done to cause a disturbance. No officers made their appearance among the crowd, allowing the boys to enjoy themselves to the extent of their abilities.

During the evening numerous bets were made on Toole and Maginnis, Carter and Power. In the early part of the evening holiday with their mother at charming holiday with their mother at the Grand Central.
